Forecast for Friday 14 May 2021

Weather: Dry overnight. Clear spells in west but more cloud in the east, some on the hills. This lifting in the morning with the west having a sunny start to the day. Then becoming more generally cloudy, and one or two showers then forming in the afternoon, though still with a good deal of dry weather around.

Chance of cloud free mountain/hill tops above 800m: 60% until mid morning and again later evening with some tops in the north and east in cloud, but more than 90% during the main part of the day and also over most west coast ranges

Visibility: Away from cloud, generally very good, with only slight reductions in showers. Cloud: occasional at 600m or above in east at first and again later in evening, otherwise above tops.
